Professor Massimiliano Piras

About the Speaker:

Professor Massimiliano Piras is a professor of air and maritime law at the Department of law of the University of Cagliari, Sardinia and is qualified as a legal practitioner in Italy. He has held the position of Full Professor of Navigation Law at the University since 2009, and has published and supervised widely. Professor Piras has also been actively involved in the maritime industry including being a member of the Management Committee of the Mar di Sardegna Port System Authority. His research interests include a project (2016-2018) on "Legal profiles of automation and new technologies". He is currently on a short teaching visit to the Unit of Maritime Law and Maritime Studies as part of an Erasmus project professor exchange. UKZN and the University of Cagliari already share a long lasting cooperation in the field of engineering.
